Around the DialsRussian Vets
On Open End

By GEORGE MAKSIAN

Four Soviet World War II fighters, who are visiting our country as guests of American veterans, will appear on David Susskind's Open End talkfest next Sunday from 8 to 9:30 P.M. over WPIX.

The Russians, who were invited on an exchange basis by a private organization called Arms of Friendship Inc., will discuss their views of the U.S. An interpreter will translate their remarks. The show will be taped Thursday.

The four Russians are: Mrs. Irina Levchenko, 40, who commanded an American-built tank during the war and received the Florence Nightingale medal from the International Red Cross; Lt. Gen. Viktor Poznyak, 63, now a professor of military science; Sergey Borzenko, 55, author, journalist and war correspondent; and Cvid Gorchakov, a guerilla fighter who worked with partisans of the Soviet behind German lines.

This marks the third time Susskind has lined up Russian guests for his TVer. In 1959 he interviewed Premier Khrushchev and before that he was host to five members of Soviet delegation.
